Kuching is one of the most attractive cities in Southeast Asia. It is a developing metropolis but over the years it has managed to keep its traditions alive by protecting the cultures of its indigenous races as well as preserving its natural habitat. Geographically Kuching is a city divided by the meandering Sarawak River, virtually dividing it in two. Kuching is also surrounded by vast lush rainforest where breathtaking natural formations like waterfalls, caves and rivers can be found. Visitors to Kuching will also discover Borneo's distinct ecology to be fascinating as they trek through the natural tropical rainforest.

The Sarawak Cultural Village is a unique and dynamic cultural centre preserving Sarawak's rich cultural heritage and sharing a global cultural harmony towards human understanding and brotherhood. Well known as Living Museum, depicts the heritage of the major racial groups in Sarawak and conveniently portrays the respective lifestyle amidst 14 acres of equatorial vegetation. Here, it is possible to see Sarawak's ethnic diversity at a glance.

The handicraft is both bewildering and tempting, including the Kain Songket (Malay cloth with gold inlay), Pua Kumbu (Iban housewives textiles), Melanau Terendak (sunhat), Bidayuh tambok (basket), Iban parang (swords), Orang Ulu wood carving and Chinese ceramic.

The 45-minute cultural performance of songs, dances and entertainment is something you will not want to miss out during your visit to Sarawak.

Fairy & Wind Caves located nearby Bau, (once a famous gold prospecting town) which is about 45 minutes drive away from Kuching.

The Fairy Cave is located in the Bukit Kapor area. It was formed some 100-150 million years ago. There are stalactite and stalagmite formations on the floor of the caves that resemble figures and animals. A few kilometers away, the Wind Cave is approached via a short and relaxing walk through light bush. The cave can be transversed without too much difficulty and ends overlooking a scheduled river scene that will most definitely take your breath away. Most of the times, it is very windy up here as well.
